

Call open: LEA WEF Multilateral Research Programme: knowledge needed on integrated solutions in water, energy and food

Aim and objectives

The Long-term Europe – Africa WEF-Nexus Multilateral Research Programme (LEA WEF) is an international initiative focusing on the interconnections between water, energy and food (WEF) within the framework of sustainable development. Using the WEF nexus approach, the programme aims to manage and optimise the complex interdependencies between these sectors. This is critical to achieving security, inclusiveness, and sustainability in the supply and distribution of water, energy and food globally.

Purpose of the call

The production and distribution of water, energy and food are highly interconnected. The LEA WEF call aims to strengthen international knowledge and cooperation in order to enable sustainable transitions.

Main objectives:

- Developing and connecting knowledge to increase the societal impact of research
- Exploring new development paths
- Finding ways to accelerate transitions to sustainable development

The Call aligns with the objectives of the LEA WEF multilateral research programme. It furthermore focuses on two subthemes:

1. Climate Change Adaptation and
2. Just Energy Transitions

Applicants are expected to focus on one or both subtheme(s), within the context of the WEF Nexus. A detailed description of the aims, objectives and selection procedure is available in the call for proposals.

This research programme calls on knowledge institutions, societal stakeholders and practitioners to form broad consortia that cooperate in research projects. In a consortium, the entire knowledge chain from fundamental to applied and practice-based research is represented, as well as expertise from societal partners.

Information webinar

An online information webinar will be organised on October 7th, 2024. During this meeting we will provide more information on the conditions of the call, national eligibility requirements and the application procedure. We will also be able to answer any questions you may have about the programme. Please register here for the information meeting.

Matchmaking session

On 7 November 2024 the LEAWEF funding partners will organise a matchmaking meeting for prospective applicants. The matchmaking is aimed at researchers, from the entire knowledge chain and various disciplines, private and public partners and other interested parties. To best facilitate matchmaking, a matchmaking platform has been set up alongside an online meeting. You will automatically be invited for the matchmaking session if you register here on the B2Match platform.

Registered initiatives from those who have submitted a partnership request form, will be invited to present their idea or initiative during the matchmaking. You are invited to submit a partnership request form here on the website of NWO.
